

The Andover Cable TV Committee's Welcome to Andover project took another step forward last month when Warner videographer George Packard (center) and his intern Juan Grafton taped Ed Hiller (right) in the Emons General Store museum in Potter Place. Ed spoke about the Andover Historical Society's activities in the community over the years.

Welcome to Andover is a video project that will introduce newcomers to our town's many clubs and organizations and, at the same time, introduce those organizations to the power of communicating with the community through video.

Andover Libraries

Exciting news! Beginning September 13, the Andover Public Library will open its doors between the hours of 10 AM through noon every Saturday throughout the year, with certain holidays excluded.

Come join the trustees that day to share in the celebration, which will be marked by balloons and refreshments. Priscilla Poulin will be there to greet one and all.

How nice it will be to see families and friends, pressed for time during the week, stop by to browse through the shelves and pick up a few good books and magazines to enjoy.

We are hoping that a core of volunteers can be developed who will be willing to share a time slot for future Saturdays. Should you be interested in volunteering, please contact me at DRice226@tds.net.

Enjoy the rest of the summer; remember to check our Web site for new book titles at AndoverLibraries.blogspot.com; and don't forget to mark your calendar for the September 13 festivities.

See you there!

Our hazard classification work at the Highland Lake Dam continues, and it looks like we will be bringing the project on home in a few weeks. We are working on a hazard classification that will be beneficial to the Town.

In the next few months we expect to get the work done on Channel Road with the culvert replacement near the East Andover Fire Department's driveway combined with road paving from Maple Street to just past EAFD.

Enjoy these summer days. May your harvest be fruitful.
