

that are crushing job creators. I am running to bring change to our state as an independent voice.

As I am traveling around the state, I continue to hear from Granite Staters about the challenges of making ends meet for their families due to the Obama-Shaheen economy. Families are struggling to pay bills for soaring energy costs and disapprove of Obamacare's premium increases and limitations that do not work for our state. I am running to repeal Obamacare and work on an all-of-the-above energy plan to lower prices and increase supply in our country.

Every time you turn on the TV, it seems like the world is on fire. From the rising threat of ISIS in the Middle East to the immigration crisis on the southern border, Granite Staters are frustrated with President Obama's incoherent foreign policy. Senator Shaheen recently said she wanted the President to stay in Washington instead of campaigning in New Hampshire, but she has voted to bring his failed policies home for the past six years. I am running to be a check and balance and ensure we keep our homeland safe and secure.

US House

Ann McLane Kuster

Last year, I went to Washington with a new approach. To end the gridlock, I've worked to bring together Representatives from both parties in order to find common ground and strengthen the middle class. Shortly into my first year, I co-founded the United Solutions Caucus, a coalition of Republicans and Democrats committed to working together to find solutions to our nation's economic challenges.

I'm beginning to see real results from this approach. As a member of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, I worked across the aisle to pass into law important reforms to ensure New Hampshire veterans can get medical care sooner, and closer to home. I successfully fought to open two new VA clinics in Colebrook and Berlin, and I partnered with a Republican from Indiana, Jackie Walorski, to pass into law important whistleblower protections for military service members who report sexual abuse.

To increase economic opportunity for Granite State workers, I've hosted a series of job fairs, where I've connected hundreds of job seekers with dozens of employers. And so that higher education remains affordable for Granite State families, I helped pass into law new reforms to prevent a doubling in student loan interest rates. In addition, I've sponsored legislation to cut taxes for small businesses, so they can reinvest in their companies, expand, and hire more workers.

I would be honored to earn your vote on November 4. If re-elected, I'll continue to fight to grow the middle class and increase economic security for Granite State families.

Executive Council

Michael J. Cryans

I grew up in Littleton and graduated from Springfield College in 1973. I have worked as a teacher, a banker (Senior VP of Dartmouth Savings Bank), a financial advisor, and was the Executive Director of a non-profit organization (Headrest, Inc.). I have been a proud Grafton County Commissioner for the past 17 years. I am married to Julie and have two sons.

My hobby is long-distance running, including seven Boston marathons. I promise that these traits of determination and energy will enable me to work diligently for the residents of District One!

The two Executive Council issues that have been the most controversial are (1) Medicaid expansion and (2) the funding of Planned Parenthood. I would have voted a definite "Yes" to each of these proposals.

Other important issues to me are increasing New Hampshire jobs, the Northern Pass, wind towers, the aging of our communities, the problematic drug epidemic, and working to keep the younger generation in northern New Hampshire.

The Executive Council votes on all nominations by the Governor for commissions, boards, and judges for districts and the superior and supreme courts. In addition, the Council votes on all state contracts. This is a unique form of government which is designed to serve as a checks and balances system.

The late Ray Burton (with whom I served for 16 years as a Grafton County Commissioner) was a master of constituent service. It is impossible to fill

Order of Candidates

This year, the Andover ballot lists the Democratic candidates in the first column and the Republican candidates in the second. For the sake of consistency with the ballot, the Beacon's On the Ballot section follows the same order.

Ray's shoes, but I am determined to walk in his footsteps to proudly represent District One in Concord.

Joseph D. Kenney

It has been my honor to serve the 108 towns and four cities in District 1. I have worked hard and committed myself full-time. I have attended all Governor and Council meetings and participated in three judicial hearings to appoint three judges.

I believe my most important contribution has been helping dozens and dozens of people with their constituent problems. I have brought agency commissioners on the road for public hearings, to bring Concord to the people of District 1. I have sought to place the right people on State boards and commissions to represent District 1 well.

I want to continue excellent constituent service and advocate for more transportation and economic development to create more jobs, tourism, and manufacturing. I want to reduce the number of sole-source contracts the State awards and simplify the RFP process so more companies want to bid. Too many contracts are going out of state, and hundreds of millions of dollars are being lost across our borders.

I will continue to support fuel assistance programs and congregate meals for our citizens and will fight to keep them funded for the upcoming winter. I am against Industrial Wind Farms and do not support Northern Pass.

I am married with two children. I am a Marine officer who served in the Persian Gulf War, Iraq, and Afghanistan. I am a former 14-year legislator, serving in the House and Senate.

If it's a problem for you, it's a problem for me. Let's solve it together.
