The Wilmot Community Association (WCA) and the Greater Sullivan County Public Health Network will host an illustrated talk and training session about Narcan® (also known to as Naloxone). The program will begin at 7 P.M. Thursday, September 28 at the Red Barn, 64 Village Road.

Speakers will include Pamela Drewniak, EMS and Emergency Prep coordinator at New London Hospital, Kirsten Vigneault, director, Community Health and Emergency Preparedness at the Greater Sullivan County Public Health Network and Tim Monahan, director of EMS and New London Ambulance Service. Representatives from the Wilmot Volunteer Fire Department and the Wilmot Police Department will also be in attendance and available to provide additional information.

The program will cover information about how Naloxone works, training on how to administer the product and time for questions from the audience. At this time, Narcan® is the only FDA-approved nasal spray that is an antidote for known or suspected opioid drug overdoses.

“Following the 439 people in New Hampshire who died from a drug overdose in 2015, the New Hampshire Department of Health and Human Services purchased Naloxone kits for distribution,” Vigneault said. “The nasal spray is very easy to use and the training only takes about 20 minutes.”

At the conclusion of the illustrated talk and training sessions, attendees will have the opportunity to practice administration as well as receive a free kit, which includes two doses of Narcan.

The WCA owns and operates the Red Barn, a community center, and Timothy Patten Park, a beach and playground. Founded in 1963, the organization promotes, organizes and provides facilities for educational, social and recreational activities in Wilmot.

More information is available from the WCA Web site, www.WilmotWCA.org and on the WCA Facebook page.

Chadwick Funeral and Cremation Service

Whatever you decide, we will be able to help.

Most people know that we will help with a traditional funeral. If you would like calling hours with a casket present and then a church service followed by a burial, we certainly could give assistance.

Many people choose cremation, and we have been guiding families who prefer that option for years and years. We now own and operate Sugar River Crematory. You may have a casket present for calling hours and a service and then cremation, or you could have calling hours with an urn present.

If you decide that you would just like to be cremated with no services, we will help in that situation also.

Please give us a call to discuss all of the options.

Fall Fare at the Wilmot Farmers Market

September brings the final month

Press release

September brings the final month of farmers market to Wilmot. A lot of things are changing. The leaves are a different color. Various vegetables have gone out of season while others are just beginning. The summer vacationers are being replaced by those preparing for wintering the season ahead. Along with the squirrels, marketers begin putting away their food for the months ahead. Wise planners begin to think of holiday giving and entertaining. Visiting the farmer's market might even fit into your schedule better at this time of year and the music, camaraderie and products continue 'til the ringing of the final bell.

The market boasts jams, jellies, pickles and relishes and a bounty of vegetables to freeze, can, or put into pantries for storage. There is meat to fill freezers and gifts for the holidays. There are yarns for making socks and socks already made. There are cards for sending and jewelry for adorning. There are soaps, lotions and cloths to wash dishes. Get a house for your feathered friends or sachets to keep mice and moths out of your house. The education tent continues through September with therapy dogs on the 9th, Eagle Pond Studio Architects on the 16th, Seed Saving on the 23rd and yet to be decided on the 30th. With five Saturdays in September, there is still time to visit the place of plenty- the town green from 9 to noon, at 9 Kearsarge Valley Road in Wilmot.
